"I bought two identical ... Do I need to check both?

A Lady's coat was tested at the Flatbush Shatnez Laboratory. The brand name was Kenneth Cole New York manufactured in China.

Its content label listed: 60% Wool, 30% Polyester, 5% Rayon and 5% Other Fibers.

The sleeve head material was a scrap of linen that was tan in color.

It was purchased at Macy's Department store in Scranton, Pennsylvania. The Shatnez Laboratory advised them that they should return it to the store and purchase another one. The new coat may appear to be identical, but it may not be shatnez. A new coat was purchased and brought to the Lakewood Shatnez Laboratory for testing. Indeed, it was not shatnez. This one had a black cotton sleeve head canvas instead.
