Mislabeled 100% Cotton Knit Outfit is Shatnez

A lady's Avagolf knit outfit was brought to the Lee Avenue Shatnez Laboratory for testing. Its contents label listed 100% Cotton. Testing revealed that it was mislabeled and it was, in fact 50% Wool, 50% Linen!

The customer was shocked because she had worn it for the Yomim Noraim and the entire winter.

Garments that are 100% Cotton do not require testing. However, tweed, textured and multi-colored fabrics should be tested anyway. They may contain wool and linen and be intrinsically shatnez even if no wool and linen is "officially" listed on its content label.
