Shatnez in a Cotton Sweater

A cotton sweater does not require testing unless it has attachments or trimmings.

A lady's Moth (China) sweater with a contents label listing 94% Cotton 6% Other Fibers, has two decorative flower pins as shown in the picture at the left. Though the upper pin was comprised of different fabric pieces, it was not shatnez.

However, the lower pin's black and white striped fabric is a linen blend, while the light blue yarn in the center of the flower is a wool blend.

Even cotton and acrylic sweaters can contain shatnez in attachments, appliqués and trimmings.
